Young Janitor Is Suspended

An 18-year-old janitor employed at URI was suspended from his job for allegedly selling an "obscene publication."

As the BEACON went to press it was not known if the boy would be reinstated without a court hearing. Antonio Flesia, president of Local 528 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, representing URI employees, said yesterday that he expected the youth to be reinstated.

Dr. F. Don James, acting president, declined comment on the matter. He said the case was still under investigation.

Mr. Flesia said the university police pre-judged the case without proper investigation.

"There are other young janitors working at URI that have been harassed and threatened by campus police," Mr. Flesia said.

"I have a letter from three witnesses that a patrolman threatened another young janitor with violence," he said.

The friction between campus police and young janitors has been "going on for some time" according to Mr. Flesia. Mr. Flesia expressed dissatisfaction with Dr. James' response to the matter.

The janitor had been suspended from his job on Jan. 19 by Lewis B. Bischoff, director of the physical plant, who said that the suspension had been recommended by the campus police.

The newspaper, Avatar, an underground newspaper published in Cambridge, Mass., was called "an obscene publication" by URI officials.

Atty. Gen. Herbert F. DeSimone said Saturday that it did not appear to be obscene under definitions set by the Rhode Island Supreme Court and the U.S. Supreme Court. He said that in the issue that he saw there was one four-letter word, which appeared in an editorial cartoon.

The BEACON learned that Avatar was being sold on campus by several persons.

Mr. Bischoff had said Friday that if the janitor is found "innocent of the charges" he would automatically be reinstated with back pay.

Mr. Flesia said that Mr. Bischoff's hands are tied by campus police in the case.

The Associated Press reported that the editor of Avatar and five other persons were arrested Saturday in Harvard Square for selling the paper. They were charged with selling obscene literature to minors.

Ram Top Scorer Escapes Injury In Auto Crash

The URI Rams, who return to the basketball wars tomorrow night against Brown at Providence, narrowly escaped losing their star performer and rebounder, Co-Capt. Art Stephenson, in an automobile accident in New York last Tuesday afternoon.

Stephenson and his brother Andy, a member of the Rhode Island freshman team, were traveling along the Major Deegan Parkway when they were forced to stop because of a tieup ahead. While they were stationary, a tractor-trailer hit their car from behind, pushing it into another automobile ahead. Both cars were demolished and had to be towed from the scene.

Art escaped injury but Andy suffered a whiplash injury, the full extent of which has not been determined. Art is leading the Rams in scoring with 306 points and a 20.4 average and has pulled down 237 rebounds for an average of 15.8 rebounds per game which places him 17th in the country in this department.

Greek Rush Starts With Rule Changes By IFC Group

Back from semester break fraternities and sororities have begun Formal Rush, a period of intensified parties, dinners, discussions and get-togethers to culminate on bids' day — two weeks away for fraternities and three for sororities.

The Inter-Fraternity Council which began formal rush with registration on Monday, has announced its new rush rules for 1968. They include:

Mitch Ryder to Perform In Winter Weekend Concert

by Linda Gillet

What's Winter Weekend without snow? It's three days and nights of dancing, skiing, and entertainment starting this Friday afternoon through Sunday night.

A Kick-Off Dance, featuring three bands playing in rotating order, will open the weekend's activities from 3-5 p.m. Friday in the Union Ballroom.

In the North End of the Ram's Den from 4:30-6 p.m. on Friday Shane Jackson, Al Allen, and the SAE Jug Band will entertain. Hot chocolate and "snow balls" will be served.

Mitch Ryder, recording star ("Sock It To Me, Baby"), will perform at Keaney Gymnasium at 8 Friday night. Winter Weekend Queen will be announced at intermission. Tickets for the concert may be purchased in advance for $2.50 ($3.00 at the door) at the Winter Weekend booth outside the Ram's Den or at Axelrod's Music Shop in Providence this week.

Snow and Ice Sculpture, open to all fraternities, sororities, and housing units, will be from 9-11 a.m. Saturday, followed by judging from 11-12 a.m.

Skiing at Yawgoo Valley at a 25 per cent discount will be available from 1-5 Saturday afternoon. At this time free movies, "Two Women" and "Divorce Italian Style" will be featured in the Union Ballroom.

A dance sponsored by the Interfraternity Council, open to both Greeks and independents, will be held Saturday, 8-12 p.m., at the Palladium at Rocky Point. "The Others" and "Big John" and the Sherwoods will be featured. Tickets will be available at $1.00 per couple at the Winter Weekend booth.

Free flicks, "Boccaccio 70" and Federico Fellini's "8-1/2" will be shown in the Union Ballroom Saturday night from 8-12.

A jazz concert will be presented Sunday afternoon from 2-4 in the North End of the Ram's Den.

The final event of Winter Weekend will be free movies, "The Knack" and "Yesterday, Today, and Tomorrow," shown at 7:30 Sunday night in the Union Ballroom.

Campus Chest Fund Drive To be Expanded by Blue Key

The Campus Chest Fund, an annual campus-wide charity drive sponsored by the Blue Key Society, will be expanded this year to include solicitations from faculty and staff members and individual housing units and organizations on campus.

The fund raising activities in recent years have been limited to the Student-Faculty Basketball Game, which was held during the Fall se-son, and the Blue Key Bazaar, in which housing units set up various game booths.

Jess Grossberg, chairman of the drive, said that in his reorganization of the drive, he hopes to make a basic set of plans which will enable future chairmen to "concentrate on improving the drive yearly, and it should also prevent the drive from falling into the state of flux in which it found itself during the past five years."

The purpose of the drive is to establish one organized charity drive on campus and to eliminate numerous solicitations by individual charities. Mr. Grossberg said. A combination of local and national charities will be represented in the fund.

Organizations which would rather have their donations go to a specific fund will be requested to make their contributions to the Campus Chest, which will then contribute the money in the name of the donor. The money will be distributed in May, when the drive is officially over.

Within a week, Mr. Grossberg said, flyers will be sent to all housing units and organizations on campus to explain the function of the drive and name the charities to be supported this year. A different (Continued on page 10)

Guatemalan Grade School Built With URI Contribution

by Paul Farragut

On June 10, 1965, students at URI, through various campus organizations, contributed $1030.00 to the Peace Corps School-to-School Program. On June 20, 1967 a simple dedication ceremony was held in Santa Ana Xococ, Guatemala celebrating the completion of an elementary school built with the donated funds.

This particular Peace Corps program encourages schools and organizations in this country to raise $1000.00 which is enough to sponsor a school in a developing country. This money is used to pay for all construction materials needed in a typical elementary school. The local community contributes the building site, arranges for a full time teacher and provides all labor free, while the Peace Corps Volunteer lends encouragement and technical advice.

The URI school is located in Rabinal township which has a population of approximately 5,000. The dialect spoken is an Indian version of Spanish and the literacy rate among the population is quite low. The people wear brightly colored clothes (you can identify where someone is from by the color of their clothing). The (Continued on page 7)

Modest Increase In Aid To Students Asked by LBJ

WASHINGTON (CPS) — President Johnson has asked Congress for modest increases in federal student aid programs during Fiscal 1969, but the increases will be offset by severe reductions in higher education construction funds.

In his budget message to Congress last week, the President requested an increase of $112 million for existing student financial aid programs. But the budget shows a decrease of $82 million in the amount of federal funds for construction grants to colleges.

The Administration's budget asks $23 million for proposed new legislation in the area of federal assistance to students. This apparently refers to President Johnson's promise in his State of the Union Message that he will recommend passage of an Educational Opportunity Act "to step up our drive to break down financial barriers separating our young people from college."

Looks Gloomy

Despite increases, the budget outlook for education in Fiscal 1969 remains gloomy for two major reasons:

—As a result of the rising costs of the war in Vietnam, a fiscally conservative mood prevails in Congress, and cutbacks are expected in nearly all of the Administration's requests.

—Higher education presently is suffering not only from the lack of sufficient appropriations in Fiscal 1968, but also from the across-the-board cutbacks in federal spending ordered by Congress late last year. Higher education construction funds, for example, were cut by about $150 million this year, about one-third of the entire year's budget appropriation.

Constrained

Wilbur Cohen, Undersecretary for the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, described the Administration's budget request as "large but constrained." He said the Administration decided to give priority to "programs involving people and research rather than to bricks and mortar."

Cohen conceded that the unmet needs in education "are very great," and he added, "There will be unmet needs for years to come. But this budget will enable us to continue the forward thrust in the major programs."

The increases in federal aid to students are spread over a number of different programs, resulting in only modest increases for each program.

Supplement

President Johnson said in his budget message that he will ask Congress for a 1968 supplemental appropriation of $4 million for the initial activities of the Public Broadcasting Corporation, which was created in 1967. In addition, a 1969 appropriation of about $33 million for grants to the Corporation will be requested.

The purpose of the Corporation is to strengthen the quality of non-commercial television and radio broadcasting and

Acting Chairman Chosen for Music

Dr. Albert C. Giebler, associate professor of music, has been appointed acting chairman of the music department following the resignation of Dr. Harold E. Headley, professor of music.

Dr. Giebler came to URI as instructor in music in 1957.

Dr. Headley will stay at URI reportedly through to the end of the current semester. He gave no reasons for his resignation.

Small, Geiselman Picked by Pros

URI football stars Howie Small and Frank Geiselman were drafted by major-league football teams in the annual pro-football draft of college players which was held last week. The 6'3", 230-pound Small, who hails from Brooklyn, N.Y., was selected as a center in the 12th round by the Minnesota Vikings of the National Football League. Geiselman, a former star at Tolman High in Pawtucket, was chosen as a flanker by the Green Bay Packers of the NFL in the 13th round drawing.

to make such public broadcasting services more widely available across the nation. The Public Broadcasting Act of 1967 broadens assistance provided for educational broadcasting facilities to include radio as well as television.

IFC RULES

the IFC in order to participate in formal rush. Rush registration will take place in the IFC Office this week. Any student not registering with the IFC will automatically forfeit his privilege of pledging a fraternity until the following semester.

A freshman must have a first semester quality point average of 2.00 in order to participate in formal rush and receive a bid.

An upperclassman may be pledged at any time, provided that he is not on scholastic probation as determined by the quality point requirements of his academic level and has registered with the IFC.

There shall be no communication between fraternity men and freshmen between midnight of the night preceding the giving of bids and the time of acceptance by the freshmen.

All freshmen who have registered with the IFC and who wish to receive a bid must be present at a special assembly to be held at 12:30 p.m. on Feb. 17 at a place to be named later. Each freshman will receive one sealed envelope containing his bids. He will not be allowed to communicate with anyone during this period. Each freshman will return his envelope with rejected bids and will go immediately to the fraternity of his choice with the accepted bid. All decisions must be made prior to one half hour after receipt of bids. Those freshmen unable to reach a decision by this time, or deciding not to accept a bid, must return all bids. These freshmen and those not receiving bids cannot be pledged until the following semester.

In the event that a freshman shall not be able to attend this assembly, he must present a written petition to the President of the Council who may, with the Council, present to the freshman his bids at the next Council meeting.

No student may pledge to more than one fraternity which is represented in the Council.

No freshman may live in any fraternity house without the prior approval of the University.

Sorority informal rush began officially in October with 638 girls registering. Until this week, individual houses have had visiting hours and dating to become acquainted with freshmen.

Sorority bids will be given February 24. Each house is allowed to pledge 25 girls.

On bids night, Panhellenic will hold a dance at the Rocky Point Palladium to which everyone is invited. A Boston band, The Bold, will play.

Foundation Gives Summer Grants

The National Science Foundation has awarded grants of $46,770 and $33,000 to URI for summer institutes in microbiology and field biology for secondary school teachers.

Dr. Chester W. Houston, associate professor of bacteriology, and Dr. Elmer A. Palamater, professor of botany, are directors of the programs. The grants provide for 70 teachers to participate in the institutes. The grants cover their health and enrollment fees, stipends for food and lodging, an allowance for each dependent, and a travel allowance.

Peace Corps Applicants, Crucial Recruiting Woes

WASHINGTON (CPS) — The Peace Corps, once the Mecca of many student idealists, is on the threshold of what could be the most crucial period in its seven-year history.

Few will deny that the Peace Corps has been one of the most successful and popular of the New Frontier programs initiated during the Kennedy Administration. But the Peace Corps now faces many new and delicate problems, most of them a direct result of the war in Vietnam.

The tactfulness with which these problems are solved within the next few years may well determine whether or not the Peace Corps can survive on a large scale, and if it can, how effective it will be in accomplishing its original mission.

On Defensive

Peace Corps officials — Who in the past have had little trouble convincing young people to give up two years of their life to work in an underdeveloped country—now find themselves on the defensive for the first time. The major problem is the Peace Corps' close association with the federal government at a time when the government is unpopular among young people. Peace Corps officials, including Agency Director Jack Vaughn, are not ready to admit the Corps has problems. But some other high-ranking government officials have confirmed privately that the Corps may be in trouble.

Recruiting figures alone indicate the Peace Corps has less appeal now than it had a year ago. In November, 1966, the Peace Corps received 7,097 applications from college seniors. Last November, applications were filed by only 3,768 seniors, nearly a 50 per cent reduction.

Applicants Down

Overall, the Peace Corps received 9,661 applications last November, compared with 12,411 in November of 1966. Recruiting also was down in December, with the Corps receiving 7,095 applications last December, compared with 8,288 in 1966.

Peace Corps officials, however, claim these figures should not be interpreted as meaning the Corps is losing its appeal to students. "The decrease is attributable to the style of recruiting in the fall of 1966 compared to that in 1967," one official explained. "In late 1966, we put on a major recruiting drive which hit its peak in November. In 1967, however, we visited 25 per cent fewer schools in the fall. During the current academic year, we will have our major recruiting effort in the spring."

Since most Peace Corps volunteers come directly from the campus, the Corps recruiting figures are based on the academic year. So far, applications this year are running about 4,000 behind last year. "But with our major recruiting drive still ahead of us, we expect to at least equal last year's figures," Vaughn says.

Losing Appeal

Despite efforts by Corps officials to convince the public that it is not losing its appeal, officials admit the Corps is more controversial on the campus today than at any other time in its history.

The main reason for this, Vaughn said, "is a feeling that we are an official part of the Establishment." One government official explained, "Before the United States became deeply involved in Vietnam, young people did not mind so much being associated with the government, but now they do."

However, Vaughn says the expanding group of student radicals who want to be completely disassociated with the government is not affecting the Peace Corps. "We don't in any sense, or never have, tried to tailor a message for the activist. Our message is more to the concerned, and the concerned can be of almost any political stripe," he said in an interview.

But Vaughn admits Peace Corps recruiting on campuses is more difficult now than it was several years ago. "Most campuses are boiling," he said. "There is more noise and more turmoil, which makes it much harder for us to get our message through." A few years ago it was easy for a recruiter to talk with students, he said. "But now there's a lot of rivalry, and it's harder to get that conversation for a half hour."

No Confrontation

Although the Peace Corps is associated with the "Establishment," there have been no problems between recruiters and student radicals, Vaughn said. "Words have been exchanged on occasion, but nothing to consider a confrontation."

The major problems for Corps recruiters comes when a college or university gives them space in their placement office rather than in a prominent open area on campus, such as in the Student Union Building, Vaughn said. "We don't seek respectability. All we seek is a chance to talk, and if nobody knows where you are, your exposure is so limited you don't have a chance to talk."

When Vaughn talks about the present status of the Peace Corps, he emphasizes that the total number of volunteers overseas—now about 15,000—is higher than ever before, and the Corps is expanding at the rate of about eight new countries a year.

Whether this expansion can continue or not, however, is uncertain. "In the past," Vaughn admits, "the only thing holding us back has been the lack of enough candidates to serve as volunteers." Since the Corps now must appeal to the young people who as a group are becoming more and more anti-government, this problem may be just beginning.

Gardner Resigns Cabinet: Budget Cut Probable Cause

College Press Service

WASHINGTON (CPS) — Secretary of Health, Education, and Welfare John W. Gardner, who has been considered one of education's closest friends for years, has resigned.

Gardner told President Johnson he planned to leave the position he has held for the past two and one-half years "on or before March 1." He said he plans to return to the Carnegie Corporation of New York as a consultant and to undertake special projects relating to the problems of cities. Gardner was president of Carnegie before his appointment to the Cabinet position July 27, 1965.

In his letter of resignation, Gardner said, "When I came to Washington I took a two-year leave of absence from the Carnegie Corporation, and have overstayed that leave half a year."

A Dove?

However, Gardner reportedly is quitting the Cabinet because he is displeased with the severe budget cuts in his department, particularly in the area of education. Gardner also is considered a dove on the Vietnam war and reportedly wants to disassociate himself from the Johnson Administration's foreign policy.

Neither Gardner's office nor officials at the Carnegie Corporation would comment on the possibility that he might stay at Carnegie for only a short while, and then assume the presidency of a major college or university. An HEW official said, "He has said he's going to Carnegie. I assume he's going to stay there." Carnegie officials would not elaborate on what Gardner's projects would specifically involve.

Gardner is known to have been considered for the presidency of Stanford University, but reportedly took himself out of the running. He is usually the leading candidate when a presidential vacancy occurs at a college or university.

Much Regret

Education officials greeted Gardner's resignation with regret, noting that he has been a close friend to all levels of education, particularly higher education. Jack Morse of the American Council on Education said, "From his days at Carnegie he has been regarded as one of education's most knowledgeable and articulate spokesmen. He has always been deeply interested and concerned about the problems of education."

Some education officials expressed fear that the new HEW Secretary may not be as close a friend to education as Gardner has been. Many top educators, they said, would not want the job for the same reasons Gardner reportedly is leaving.

During the current fiscal year, Gardner has had to cut nearly $550 million from HEW programs that were to be funded over the next six months. The cuts were made in response to last December's budget-cutting legislation which was necessary because of the high costs of the war.

Cutbacks

About 90 per cent of the $550 million cutback came from construction grants, particularly in the area of education. Higher construction construction funds were cut by $150 million, about one-third of the entire year's budget appropriation. In addition, funds for many higher education programs were cut by Congress during the regular appropriations process. The Office of Education failed to get a budget increase during the current fiscal year for the first time in 10 years.

The Higher Education Act was passed by Congress four months after Gardner took office. This Act, coupled with the earlier National Defense Education Act and the Higher Education Facilities Act, has made solid progress in meeting the major problems of higher education.

"Some of the engineers who graduated before me complained that their education didn't mean much in their jobs. That's not what I wanted," says IBM's Jim Carr. (Jim is a Manager of Mechanical Process Engineering.)

"At IBM I knew I'd be using what I learned. There's so much diversity here that you can usually work in the specific area you choose. In my own case, I majored in Mechanical Engineering and minored in Metallurgy. Today my ME degree means more than ever. And I often use my metallurgical background. For example, I'm now working on a process development program that requires a knowledge of machine design, metallurgy, heat transfer, and chemistry, all of which I studied in school.

"Another good thing about IBM's diversity is that it creates an interdisciplinary environment. You get a chance to work with and learn from people in many different fields. Since our industry is growing so fast, the people you talk to are likely to be working at state-of-the-art levels or beyond."

There's a lot more to the IBM story than Jim has mentioned. We'd like to tell you about it when we're on campus. We'll be interviewing for careers in Marketing, Computer Applications, Programming, Research and Development, Manufacturing, and Field Engineering.

Sign up for an interview at your placement office, even if you're headed for graduate school or military service. And if you can't make a campus interview, send an outline of your interests and educational background to J. E. Bull, IBM Corporation, 425 Park Avenue, New York, New York 10022. Letters to the Editor

YAF Chairman Hopes To Set Record Straight

This letter is intended to correct what we in Young Americans for Freedom consider to be a general misunderstanding of the nature, directions and beliefs of our organization. Whether or not this misunderstanding has been the result of a deliberate effort to exaggerate our positions, by those who represent our opposition, or simply a failure of our organization to present its positions in a clear light, is not the issue with which I want to deal in this letter.

We feel that our credo is effectively stated in the Sharon Statement, a statement of principle adopted at the founding conference of Young Americans for Freedom at Sharon, Conn., Sept. 9 - 11, 1960:

In this time of moral and political crisis, it is the responsibility of the youth of America to affirm certain eternal truths.

We as young conservatives believe:

That foremost among the transcendent values is the individual's use of his God-given free will, whence derives his right to be free from the restrictions of arbitrary force;

That liberty is indivisible, and that political freedom can not long exist without economic freedom;

That the purposes of government are to protect these freedoms through the preservation of internal order, the provision of national defense, and the administration of justice;

That when government ventures beyond these rightful functions, it accumulates power which tends to diminish order and liberty;

That the Constitution of The United States is the best arrangement yet devised for empowering government to fulfill its proper role, while restraining it from the concentration and abuse of power;

That the genius of the Constitution — the division of powers — is summed up in the clause which reserves primacy to the several states, or to the people, in those spheres not specifically delegated to the Federal government;

That the market economy, allocating resources by the free play of supply and demand, is the single economic system compatible with the requirements of personal freedom and constitutional government, and that it is at the same time the most productive supplier of human needs;

That when government interferes with the work of the market economy, it tends to reduce the moral and physical strength of the nation; that when it takes from one man to bestow on another, it diminishes the incentive of the first, the integrity of the second, and the moral autonomy of both;

That we will be free only so long as the national sovereignty of the United States is secure; that history shows periods of freedom are rare, and can exist only when free citizens concertedly defend their rights against all enemies;

That the forces of international Communism are, at present, the greatest single threat to these liberties;

That the United States should stress victory over, rather than coexistence with, this menace; and

That American foreign policy must be judged by this criterion: does it serve the just interests of the United States?

In closing I want to stress, Young Americans for Freedom is anxious to hear all thoughts and suggestions regarding our policies and programs. We feel that the Sharon Statement provides a broad enough framework to encompass a wide range of views. The direction of our organization is, to the greatest extent, determined by the opinions of our members.

I would encourage anyone who holds views in accord with the principle of our Sharon Statement, and who would like to see those views channeled through an organization which is willing and able to put these ideas to work, to attend one of our meetings, as an observer or prospective member.

Calverly Scored By Ram Fan

Dear Sir:

There has been a lot of discussion about the fortunes of our basketball team.

We all know that before Ernie Calverley became head coach at URI our basketball was at an all time low. He brought the team back to be a respected team on the East Coast. However, one man can only do so much for a team, unless he is a great coach. Ernie Calverley is not a great coach. He has done as much as he can for URI basketball; it seems apparent that he can do no more. If we want URI's basketball fortune to get better, it is time for a change in our coaching ranks.

Recently I read a story about a former assistant coach for a school in R.I. whose professional team won 15 games in a row. The head coach at this University must be great in order to have an assistant who is able to step into the pro ranks and do such a great job. Perhaps, though, this assistant coach was really the man doing the work at the University, and the head coach was the one who was receiving all the praise for the team's success in its best years. Since this assistant left, his former school is playing less than .500 ball.

Let's make a change now, we have waited long enough. As a matter of fact, we may have waited one year to long.

How About URI Hockey? Reader Wants One Now

Dear Sir:

As a student at the University of Rhode Island, I would like to propose the idea of starting a hockey team to compete on an intercollegiate level. This university is the only college in the Yankee Conference lacking in what I think is the most exciting of winter sports. Having played hockey in high school, I have a definite interest in doing whatever I can to promote the formation of a team.

I believe that hockey will come eventually to the university, but by the time the new athletic complex is constructed, most of the present students will have graduated.

My experience in initiating organizations is limited, but if there is support by the student body and interested persons, steps may be taken by the athletic department in organizing a Ram Hockey Team. If immediate action is taken, we might play a few complimentary games next year.

There are several petitions around the campus. If interested persons sign them or send their names to the athletic department, they will be helping to hasten the creation of a hockey team at the University of Rhode Island.

Let's Investigate

An 18-year-old janitor was suspended from his job at URI for allegedly selling an obscene publication.

Antonio Flesia, president of Local 528 of the American Federation of State, County and Municipal employees, representing URI employees, stated that he felt the campus police acted hastily in the case and possibly acted without proper investigation.

Mr. Flesia said that he had reason to believe other young janitors have had difficulties with the university police.

Because the case is still being investigated, it would be unwise to draw any specific conclusions at this time.

But the case should be thoroughly and completely investigated.

Neither Mr. Flesia nor university officials should settle for anything less.

Gradual Progress

Small miracles do happen at URI once in a while.

A one-stop registration procedure was initiated at Keaney Monday reducing the number of cattle lines to a minimum. After you had your grades, your schedule and the personnel dean's little LDM card, you could go your way and not be bothered with anything else.

As an added attraction, Alpha Omega gave out free goodies in a little plastic bag.

If it is possible to think back as far as pre-registration, you might recall that on the first day, the cards were distributed from the Union Ballroom, this eliminated the mess that usually formed on the Administration Building first floor.

The only thing left to conquer is Rodman's lines and IBM snafus. In the latter case there are horror stories all over campus after each registration day.

And so progress, while not URI's most important product, is known to rear its head around the campus on occasion.

Guatemalan Grade School Built With URI Contribution

principle diet consists of tortillas and beans. Under-nutrition is prevalent.

The new school replaces an unsafe structure which was scrapped as soon as the roof was completed in the new structure. The school is constructed of adobe brick with a portion of roof from the old structure. It is designed to accommodate students in grades one to four. Average attendance is 64 students.

The fund raising drive was highlighted by the receipt of a personal letter from Sargent Shriver, the former Director of the Peace Corps, which made note of the fact that the Graduate Student Association was the first such body to participate in this program. The contributors were: The sponsoring Graduate Student Association $250., Interfraternity Council $200., Blue Key Paul Farragut is a 1966 graduate now employed as a city planner by the Regional Planning Council in Baltimore.

$180., Student Senate $150., Association of Women Students and Alpha Zeta Fraternity $50. each, and the Womens Athletic Association, Panhellenic Council, All Nations Club, Aggie Club, Newman Club, and the Canterbury Club $25. each.

The teacher at the school, Mrs. Matilde Perez Leal, was a staunch supporter of this building program and wrote in 1965 a personal letter to the URI student body.

"When the work is completed I'll send you a photograph in which you will see smiling faces giving thanks and appreciation which these students will carry in their hearts," she said.

Much of the project's success belongs to Peace Corps Volunteer Lewis Johnson of Apple Valley, Cal. He braved red tape, fiestas and antiquated building practices during the two years the school was under construction and never appeared to get discouraged. Many delays were caused by unusual business practices.

For example, before the roof beams could be obtained an order had to be placed with a large down payment and it was two months before the materials arrived. The windows and doors had to be specially made and when plastering commenced, it was necessary to contract for 5 tons of lime which was delivered 100 pounds at a time. The sand that was needed for the brick came from a river which was one half mile away and the townspeople carried it on their back in 5 gallon lard cans. Some time elapsed before the town council hired a plasterer and the movement of the tile from Guatemala City was a long, slow process.

In his final report, Johnson concluded:

"The people of Santa Ana Xococ have learned to organize themselves and work together to better their community. They remember the young American who helped them build the school and the school in the U.S.A. who furnished the money. They know that we want to help them help themselves and they appreciate it."

Alan Smith works in our Salary Administration Division in Boston. Alan earned his B.A. from Harvard in 1965.

Charles Grier is a management trainee in the Policy Contract Service Department in Boston. Chuck graduated in 1966 from Tuskegee Institute.

Selling life insurance is big business. So big that John Hancock is selling nationwide. So we need a lot of talented salesmen like Frederick Brown—who can choose their own locations. But that's just the beginning, we also need a lot of talented nonsalesmen like Alan Smith and Charles Grier for positions as:

computer programmers
And mathematicians.
And accountants.
And researchers.
And management trainees.
And people to manage these people.
And people to manage the whole business. (Presidents are made, not born.)

You'll find that no matter what your degree will be, John Hancock probably has a career for you. The John Hancock recruiter will be here to see you.

Ex-Student Editor Loses Press Case In Oregon Court

SALEM, Ore. (CPS) — The Oregon Supreme Court has upheld the conviction of a former student editor who refused to disclose the names of seven student marijuana users she interviewed.

The editor, Mrs. Annette Buchanan Conard, said she plans to appeal the decision to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The interview appeared in the May 24, 1966 edition of the University of Oregon Daily Emerald, of which she was managing editor. She was subpoenaed by Eugene, Ore. District William Frye but refused to reveal the names of the students to a grand jury, despite a court order that she do so. She was then cited for contempt of court and fined $300.

In the arguments before the Oregon Supreme Court, the state maintained that her refusal constituted withholding information necessary for the arrest and prosecution of drug users. Mrs. Conard's attorney, Arthur Johnson, countered that the Constitutional provisions for a free student press included the right of a reporter to withhold the identity of confidential news sources.

But the state Supreme Court decision, written by Justice A.T. Goodwin, says, "Nothing in the state or federal constitutions compels the courts, in the absence of statutes, to recognize such a privilege. Freedom of the press is a right which belongs to the public. It is not the private reserve of those who possess the implements of publishing."

Oregon has no law which allows newsmen to refuse to reveal confidential sources, as doctors and ministers can. Thirteen states do have such a law. Mrs. Conard has been working for passage of such a law in Oregon. She said she was "disappointed" at the Supreme Court's decision and that it made passage of such a law all the more necessary.

75th Fund Aids Student Programs

URI's 75th Anniversary Fund received a total of $451,711 from 10,040 donors, Charles A. Hall, vice president for development and public relations, said today in announcing the outcome of the campaign.

Representing the largest amount ever raised by URI, the total is 80 per cent greater than the goal of $250,000 announced in January 1966 when the effort was undertaken.

The funds are being used for a variety of purposes, but the largest single amount — over $154,000 — is going towards student aid programs, including $92,555 allocated towards the scholarship endowment of the URI Foundation. Established in 1957 to encourage and administer gifts from private sources, the Foundation now has an endowment with a book value of $605,337.

Mr. Hall reported.

Proceeds of the campaign are being used for various cultural enrichment programs, including the expansion of museum collections, adding to the visiting scholars' and artists' endowment, the acquisition of rare books and works of art, the publication of "Rhode Island Wildflowers," and the installation of a carillon for the entire campus.

English Debators To Meet Team From URI Tues.

Two young Englishmen, judged to be the best debators in Great Britain, will meet URI debators next Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Fine Arts auditorium. Their appearance here is being sponsored by the URI Debate Union. Admission is free.

Andrew R. Parrish and Nicholas Wall are currently touring the United States. They have accepted invitations to debate teams from only nine other colleges while they are in this country.

Nancy Newbury, publicity chairman of the URI Debate Union, said that it is "an honor that the London-Cambridge Debators accepted our invitation to debate at URI."

Parrish, 22, was the winner of the King's College Inter-Faculty Debate tournament and a finalist in the Observer Mace tournament. He holds a B.S. degree in chemistry from King's College, University of London. He is currently doing post-graduate study in chemical engineering at the same school.

Wall, 22, is a past president of both the Cambridge Debating Society and the Cambridge Union Society. He received a B.A. degree in literature and law from Trinity College, Cambridge. He also was a finalist in Observer Mace.

At URI, they will debate Mark Spangler and Lionel Peabody on "Be it resolved that flower power is deplorable."

Spangler, who will debate affirmatively, is a senior English major and a fourth year debator. He is president of the URI Debate Union.

Peabody who will debate negatively is vice president of the URI Debate Union. He is a senior zoology major and a fourth year debator.

set of flyers will be distributed among faculty and staff members which, in addition to an explanation of the drive, will request contributions.

Mr. Grossberg plans to meet with presidents of all housing units and organizations to further explain the purpose of the Campus Chest Fund.

The charity drive was organized in the early 1950's by Dr. John F. Quinn, who is presently the vice president for academic affairs and advisor to the Campus Chest Drive. In its early years it was sponsored by the Student Senate and Sachems, but eventually was taken over by the Blue Key Society.

"The Campus Chest Drive is important not only because a group of well deserving charities will be supported, but also because the drive is representing the University of Rhode Island," Mr. Grossberg said.

Mr. Grossberg's assistants are Denise McQueeney and Alex Nelson, both members of Blue Key.

SECOND SEMESTER continues the trend: lines, boredom and fleeing time.

First College Bowl Begins

The first match of URI College Bowl Tournament will be held Monday night at 7 in the Union Browsing room. The tournament, based on the G.E. College Bowl television show, will run for ten weeks on Monday nights, as fraternities, sororities and dorms compete for trophies in the men's and women's divisions.

Seventeen housing units will compete in the men's division and seven in the women's. Two or three games will be played each week, depending on time.

Last year's winner in the men's division was Sigma Phi Epsilon. In the women's division, Alpha Delta Pi won the trophy.

Dr. F. Don James, acting president of the university, will be the master of ceremonies for the first game. The games are open to the public.

How to interview 130 companies in half an hour.

Talk to the man from General Electric. He represents 130 separate GE "companies" that deal in everything from space research to electric toothbrushes. We call them product departments. Each one is autonomous with its own management and business objectives. That's why a job at General Electric offers the kind of immediate responsibility you might expect to find only in a small business. Right from the start you get a chance to demonstrate your initiative and individual capabilities. And the more you show us, the faster you will move ahead. As you do, you'll find that you don't necessarily have to spend a lifetime working on the same job in the same place. We have operations all over the world. Chances are you'll get to try your hand at more than one of them. Our interviewer will be on campus soon. If you're wondering whether it's possible to find challenging work in big business, please arrange to see him. He speaks for 130 "companies."

TENACIOUS RAM: Art Stephenson leaps high for rebound in game against UConn. Rhody won the contest by 13 points.

UMass, UConn Pose Big Threat

by Bill Oziembleski

The Yankee Conference title is not wrapped up, according to Coach Ernie Calverley.

Despite the basketball Rams' enviable position in the Conference with five wins and no losses, Calverley said, "The team if it plays just average ball could lost to Massachusetts and Connecticut. Both teams had trouble on the road against Vermont and Maine. Massachusetts lost to Vermont and Connecticut was down by 10 points against Maine with five minutes to play and just managed to win."

URI's most threatening opposition is UConn and UMass, both with 4-2 records. Even if Rhode Island does win the Conference championship Coach Calverley views the chances of a tournament bid as slight, since a new National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) ruling states that the Yankee Conference winner does not automatically qualify for a post season tournament.

Rhody's main problem so far has been its height. John Fultz has been improving in his rebounding, and the coach attributes his earlier difficulty around the boards to inexperience.

"In high school," Calverley said, "Fultz used to bring the ball up the court and he now has to get accustomed to following the ball more, moving between the players and crashing the boards."

Andy Stephenson, of Corona, N.Y. is third with a 14.1 average, while Jim Nester of Hollywood, Fla., rounds out the top four with an average of 11.1.

Ch.E.s at Merck... "You know that isothermal recrystallization process Dick Klophaus* worked out?"

*A graduate of Newark College of Engineering (B.S.Ch.E., 1965), Dick Klophaus helped perfect techniques to improve output of this complex crystalline compound—an important component in nutritional supplements.

...it's working out just fine."

Dick Klophaus gets real satisfaction from the variety and sophistication of engineering needed to develop, design, and manage the processes required to produce Merck products.

He and his Ch.E. colleagues get equal satisfaction from the knowledge that the end result of their work is a better life for more people, around the world.

For many engineers, it's an ideal combination. Add mobility... real opportunity for growth and promotion... real opportunity to learn and develop new techniques... Merck's liberal policies on benefits, graduate work, and professional achievement... Merck's outstanding sales growth (122% since 1957) and research investment ($46 million this year).

Add all these factors together, and you'll see why Merck attracts some of the finest engineering talents in the country. And keeps them.

How about you? Think about the engineering variety and sophistication required to produce the complex molecules used for pharmaceutical products. Think about the good use these products are put to.

Then see your Merck Representative on campus.

Dick Klophaus, by the way, now supervises production of Vitamin C, Vitamin K₁, and various sulfa products. His responsibilities, and those of other young Ch.E.s, are described in our new booklet, Merck: an engineer's company. You'll not only learn from this booklet—you'll actually enjoy reading it. Outstanding Sportsmen

EDITORIAL

by Greg Fiske
Beacon Sports Editor

Hearty congratulations from the sports desk go to Maurice Zarchen, URI Athletic Director, and Bob Narcessian, an outstanding member of the URI track team, for the respective awards recently presented to them.

Mr. Zarchen, who was selected as the 1968 recipient of the Frank Lanning Award for the most outstanding contribution to sports in Rhode Island, received the award at the 22nd annual Words Unlimited Sports Awards Dinner at Johnson's Hummocks Restaurant in Providence on January 29th.

The award was given for administrative excellence on the part of Mr. Zarchen, whose present and far-sighted future plans for the improvement of URI athletics include the new sports complex which will be added to the present indoor athletic facilities. The completion of the new athletic plant is scheduled for 1970. Also in Mr. Zarchen's plans for future expansion is a beautiful new indoor hockey rink.

NCAA CHAMP

Junior Bob Narcessian of Woonsocket, Rhode Island has also moved into the URI sports spotlight as the recent winner of the 1968 Edward E. Haire Award as the outstanding AAU athlete in Rhode Island. Bob, like Mr. Zarchen, was honored by Words Unlimited, the association of sports writers and sportscasters in Rhode Island, last January 29th.

Narcessian was cited for winning the national intercollegiate hammer-throw championship last spring, when he completed a sweep of all the major intercollegiate meets. These include the New England, Yankee Conference, and IC4A.

Narcessian's most recent achievement was his victory in the hammer-throw event at the 79th annual Boston A.A. Games which was held two weeks ago at the Boston Garden. On his winning throw, Bob heaved the 35-pound weight 59 feet, 8 1-4 inches. The throw set a new URI record, breaking the old mark of 58 feet 4 1-4 inches dating back to 1938.

JOHN FULTZ goes for a two-pointer against the Connecticut Huskies at Keaney. No. 4 under basket is Art Stephenson.

Calverley Favors Tough Rhody Hoop Schedule

by Barbara Boice

The team had practiced shots and breakaways and were then conducting an intra-squad scrimmage as a voice told them what they were doing wrong. This voice belongs to the URI basketball coach, Ernie Calverley.

URI Alumnus

Coach Calverley is well oriented in the job of coaching the Ram hoopsters. In high school he made the all-state team for three successive years and also had the distinct honor of being named to the all-New England team.

An alumnus of URI, Calverley continued competing in the winter sport. As successful and competent as in high school, the coach, who captained the Ram team for three years, was named to the all-New England basketball team for four years and became an All-American in his junior and senior years. He also played in the National Invitation Tournament, making the all-tournament first team in both 1945 and 1946. He was named most valuable player in the tournament in 1946.

Basketball was not his only interest, however. Coach Calverley was elected president of his college class for three years, and because of his contributions to the school, was named to the Who's Who in American Colleges.

Rams Play Zone Defense

In talking about coaching, Calverley said, "When I started coaching, it was a strictly rebuilding program. Rhode Island had very poor records. The first season we finished with a 4 and 16 record while recruiting players from the intramural teams."

The coach diligently built the team, recruiting boys who were interested in playing varsity ball. By Calverley's third year at the helm, the team had broken the 500 mark in their seasonal record and by their fourth, won national recognition by competing in the post season NCAA tournament.

"We now have to play zone, but when I first started coaching we used the fast break and man to man defense," continued the coach. "The seasonal schedule has been increased and last year our schedule was considered the nineteenth toughest in the nation."

'They Ask Us To Compete'

Calverley feels it is important that the boys play tough opposition. Because of this, he has had the team play in various tournaments all over the country so that they could experience different types of teams, plays and attitudes.

This year the Rams played in New Mexico in the Lobo Tournament, and finished second.

In past years the team has traveled to Madison Square Garden in New York, Oklahoma City, Houston, El Paso, Arizona, Miami, and Memphis. "Now we are able to choose the teams we want to play," continued Calverley. "They ask us to compete against them, and because of this, we can get a good seasonal schedule."

To the coach, this year's team has an exceptionally good attitude toward playing. When the team traveled to California and New Mexico, the coach explained, "The boys' attitudes were fine, and there was no problem even when we lost. It's a joy to take them on a trip. The comradeship makes it worth it."

A coach who feels that just the idea of keeping a good attitude and being able to maintain good communication between his boys is important, perhaps as important as a win-loss record...this is Ernest Calverley.

ARE COUNTRY SET GIRLS SPOILED? ABSOLUTELY!

Stephenson Top Ram Scorer

Co-Captain Art Stephenson, whose superb performances over the first half of the season both offensively and defensively have gained him a berth on three Eastern College Athletic Conference teams of the week, currently leads the URI basketball team in all scoring departments. Big Art leads in field goals, field goal percentage, free throws, rebounds, total points, and scoring average.

Fine Returns To Hoop Quintet

Harvey Fine, who fell victim to pneumonia three days before the basketball season opened, will rejoin the URI squad for the remainder of the season. Harvey, a six-foot, 170-pounder from Lynbrook, N.Y., was an outstanding player on last year's freshman team.
